COURSE OBJECTIVES:
This course examines the role of language and culture in the organization of human experience. Beginning with definitions of language and signs and debates about linguistic relativity, the course explores the way language use shapes cognition and practice in social contexts. In addition we will explore the basic theoretical principles that underlie the anthropological study of human language. This will include identifying distinctive characteristics of human language, clarifying the central role of reference in regimenting linguistic structure, the application of different types of anthropological models, the creation of social and cultural forms and the socio-cultural shaping of language and usage. There will be a significant amount of reading for the course and much of it will introduce potentially unfamiliar jargon. To help with this I recommend acquiring Key Terms in Language and Culture, by Alessandro Duranti (Blackwell Publishers). However this text is not required.

REQUIRED TEXTS:

All other readings for the course will be on Blackboard.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:
Class participation (including attendance and discussion): 10%

Students are expected to attend all lectures and participate in class discussions.
In-Class Presentation: 20%

In-Class presentations will be given by all members of the class and will consist of presenting a day’s readings, producing a written handout and composing 3 questions for broad discussion. The questions must address major concepts or problems in the texts. You will evaluated on all three components, each bearing equal weight. If there is a small enrollment students may be asked to do this assignment twice.

Mid-Term Exam: 35%
